

Injuries critical for plane crash victims

A Lubbock man and his wife were critically injured just after noon Saturday when their light plane, apparently plagued by engine trouble, crashed just west of the old outdoor movie theatre west of Canyon.

A man identified as Don Randolph of Randolph Construction Co. in Lubbock, was pinned in the ripped and gutted Beechcraft Bonanza for almost 30 minutes before Canyon firemen working with Sheriff's deputies were able to remove him from the wreckage.

His wife was in critical condition Saturday afternoon. She was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. Randolph was taken to Neblett Memorial Hospital.

The woman was removed readily from the plane. Dr. Charles Nester administered emergency treatment to Randolph as firemen worked to free the Lubbock man from the fuselage.

The crash broke a power line into Canyon and knocked out some electrical service to some parts of the city.

Eyewitness Bill Sternberg of Canyon told The News he was going to his apartment, heading west on U.S. 60 when he saw the Randolph plane flying low just above the highway.

"It looked like he was trying to land on the highway," Sternberg said.

The Canyon businessman said he noticed the plane was flying low and that the plane appeared to be coming into an approach along busy U.S. 60.

"I guess he had engine trouble," Sternberg said.

He said the plane hit a power line which spans U.S. 60 from north to south across the road.

"I saw the lines flash and I knew he was in trouble," Sternberg said.

He said the plane rolled quickly to the left after hitting the power line and then he lost sight of the

Retail survey could aid locals in competition

A survey of retail merchandising in the City of Canyon could help local merchants meet the competition in Amarillo which is draining away shoppers' dollars, a West Texas State University professor told more than a dozen merchants

Thursday night.

Bill Semmelbeck, spokesman for the WTSU Center for Business and Economic Research, told the merchants a survey his center could perform would help merchants learn consumer habits in Canyon and enable them to retain more of the shopping dollar.

Semmelbeck presented a brief outline of the survey his center could perform if local merchants and the Canyon Chamber of Commerce seek the survey.

The chamber sponsored the Thursday night meeting to interest local merchants in the survey project.

Following the meeting, John Childs, chamber president, said interest among the merchants who attended seemed to be good indication that adequate funding will be available to pursue the survey.

The survey, which would be conducted this spring hopefully, would give merchants statistical information about where local residents shop, why they shop there and what services they seek when they shop.

Childs urged the merchants to back the survey effort.

Semmelbeck told the merchants the survey would enable them to better plan their inventories and business ap

Hulking Woody Pond, whose outstretched hand has helped everyone from the 13-year-old car thief to the family suffering the loss of a loved one, clasped the symbol of a community's gratitude Saturday night as he accepted a plaque as Canyon's 1973 Citizen of the Year.

Pond, county judge now but earlier juvenile probation officer, received the award at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet held on the West Texas State University campus.

An audience of 400 listened as Outgoing Chamber President Raymond Raillard listed the attributes of Pond, a country boy who's given his helping hand to most worthy causes in the Panhandle area.

Pond's recognition capped an evening of entertainment and speech-listening for the audience at the banquet.

Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, president of WTSU, was keynote speaker for the banquet. All proceeds from the affair, over and above costs of the banquet itself, are to be donated to the university President's Development fund.

Pond was cited as this year's Citizen of the Year recipient for his devotion to the county and region young people.

A native of the northeastern Panhandle, Pond served a term as county judge of Roberts County several years ago.

He came to Canyon in the 1960s and was the county's first juvenile probation officer. Under his tutelage, the office was made vital to law enforcement in the county.

In 1970, Pond was named Randall County judge and from that vantage point, Pond has joined with various groups and associations to work for the area's young people and for the welfare of the less fortunate.

Pond's activities with youth are epitomized by his work in helping Girlstown, U.S.A., obtain a much-needed bus

Earth satellite eyeing county, NASA studying crops photos

NASA officials, their gaze usually cast to the heavens, scurried around Randall County farm lands last week doing a job that's definitely down-to-earth.

The officials were in the county comparing photographs of farm lands in the northwestern portion of the county with the farm lands in person.

County Agent John Brazzil said NASA has undertaken a project to photograph agricultural areas from an orbiting earth satellite with an eye to perfecting the technique to provide information for agricultural economists.

Photographing began last September just as a good grain sorghum crop was maturing in county fields and will continue through the maturation and cultivation of the county's wheat crop in the summer months.

Brazzil said NASA officials are working with officials at the Bushland agricultural research station on the photograph experiment.

He explained the program:

As the earth satellite passes over the county area each 18 days the satellite will photograph with special cameras the approximately 10 section by 10 section area in the northwest portion of the county.

The photographs will be transmitted to earth and NASA officials will come to the county to examine the croplands on the ground that were photographed from the air.

Comparisons will be made to help NASA and other officials determine whether it is feasible to use such high level photography to help the nation's farmers and agricultural economists determine crop yields and production potential at any phase of growth.

Brazzil said the officials are attempting "to find a correlation between the growth and progress of

Our World

Who's The Underdog?

By ANN BROWN

The wily coyote like his human counterpart, who is protected by law, is moving in and taking over.

Ranchers have always battled coyotes; it's the way of life.

Police have always battled outlaws; it's what they are paid for. But when the policemen are handcuffed, and the outlaws are given a free hand, the cutthroats are sure to win.

In March, 1972, President Nixon bowed to the pressure of Nathaniel P. Reed, assistant secretary for fish, wildlife, and parks, and banned the use of poison in predator control. The result was a coyote population explosion.

Stockmen are a proud and independent breed, and production is their business. They have to understand and control the environment to survive.

Now that men in Washington who know nothing of the practical problems of predators are protecting the killers, baby lambs, kid goats, calves, and wildlife are disappearing.

How long can the coyotes feast on lamb chops, veal cutlets, pheasant, quail, and venison before depleted supplies alert the public to the danger?

According to the Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers Association (TSGRA) more than 100 million pounds of red meat was lost to predators in 1972.

Coyotes are driving the smaller farmers and ranchers out of business, and the hunters to more bountiful game areas.

How can a man who is forced to spend all his time chasing coyotes run a ranch? And as each ranch is liquidated, the predators simply move on to the next one.

Coyotes have become so numerous and so bold that they catch the farmer's chickens and turkeys in broad daylight, kill his cat if it is not kept in at night, and rip up his dog.

Would the men in Washington want to protect such creatures if they had to contend with them?

A truck driver expressed himself on television recently as wishing Americans would get hungry enough to appreciate the current predicament of the trucks.

Many ranchers have expressed the same sentiment relative to predators.

Lofly ideals won't fill empty stomachs; it takes food. And the production of food requires realism as well as hard work.

It is unrealistic to expect trucks to transport food without fuel, or coyotes and sheep to live in the same area.

Even before the ban on poison, outlying ranchers reported a 20 percent loss to predators. How many firms could survive 20 percent being skimmed off the top of their business?

Poison is the cheapest, most effective tool in the rancher's eternal struggle for survival against predators. The TSGRA is leading in the fight to regain access to poison, but without success.

In the meantime, the stockmen fight coyotes in planes, helicopters, pickups, on horseback, and with traps; but the predators are constantly gaining ground.

Government trappers and concerned individuals have joined in the crusade against the killers. But one report estimated current methods would cost a minimum of $50 an acre to rid the land of coyotes — even if it could be done.

Recently, Mary Tyler Moore appeared on television, and appealed to the public to join her in a crusade against all trapping of animals.

Why should rational people want to protect mangy, vicious, worthless coyotes at the expense of sheep, calves, and chickens?

But is it any more astounding than the protection of sadistic murderers at the expense of their innocent victims?

The Creator commissioned man to subdue the earth and have dominion over it.

Man's success in subduing the earth has been accomplished through the use of tools. Won't the banning of any useful, productive tool lower our standard of living?

Man lived through an age of innocence and an age of reason. Surely history will designate this as the age of insanity.

Band To Begin Concerts

The West Texas State University Symphonic Band will officially begin its annual concert tour Feb. 3 with a performance in the Fine Arts Theatre on the WTSU campus at 3 p.m. The concert, which is free to the public, is only the first in a series which will carry the band to eight cities in Texas.

The musicians, under the direction of Dr. Gary Garner, will begin their trek Monday, Feb. 4 when they perform at 8 p.m. under the sponsorship of the Coronado High School Band.

Wednesday, the band will take to Winters, Brownwood, and Lampasas. Belton and Sugarland will be tour stops on Thursday.

The grand finale of the tour will be Friday when the band appears before the Texas Music Educators Association Convention in Houston. The concert will be at 12:00 noon in the Music Hall Theatre before an audience of approximately 2,000 music educators from throughout the state.

This marks the WTSU band's third appearance at the annual TMEA meeting, the others being in 1968 in Austin and in Houston in 1971.

In the TMEA convention performance, the band will be assisted by Harvey Pittel, nationally-known saxophone virtuoso, who will act as soloist in one number.

Dr. Gary Garner, director of bands at WTSU, is presently serving in his eleventh year in that position. He previously served as director of the Trojan Marching Band at the University of Southern California. He is assisted by Donald Baird, an instructor in brass at WT. Baird is a former euphonium soloist with the United States Army Band in Washington, D.C.

Good Work Gets Short Shrift
From Non-Working Commission

By CARROLL WILSON

While Randall County commissioners assure themselves of a good annual salary for not working, they have shown little interest in taking care of the more than 80 employees of the county who are paid a liveable wage for working.

Commissioners, as you know, make $7440 per year. They're not the highest paid county officials, but they're the highest paid non-working county officials.

For the working employees of the county, little attention has been paid to salaries and salary equity.

For years, county commissioners have adjusted all salaries for county employees on an annual basis. Usually, raises are given across-the-board and as a kind of cost-of-living allowance.

No raises are given on a merit basis and no real effort is made to assure that salaries for given jobs are equitable.

Thus, last week, several women employees of the county complained they feel they are being discriminated against because a male employee of the county clerk's office is making a salary equal to theirs.

Randall County does not have a formalized pay plan. That fact, in itself, is almost incomprehensible.

That means that if you've been with the county for 20 years, your salary is the same as for somebody who was employed by the county six months ago, if your jobs are the same. No longevity pay, then, is a basic problem.

If you work hard at your job and innovate, your pay remains the same as the employee who does just enough work to get by. Merit raises are a problem.

Equitable hiring practices are also a problem, because each elected county official wants to take care of the employees in his division.

In essence, the county's salary system is no system at all. It is arbitrary.

County commissioners had a chance several months ago to contract with an outside firm through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to perform a salary survey and establish an equitable salary pay plan system.

The City of Canyon contracted for the service to upgrade an existing pay plan for its employees. The cost to the city is only $600. Commissioners, as I recall, didn't even discuss the possibility.

Apparently, though, they believe that a fair and equitable pay plan is what they've hired Bill Frances, Amarillo auditor, to come up with when he conducts a performance audit this spring.

Frances says flatly that a pay plan will not be the result of his audit of county employees.

County officials are on the offensive this spring to try to prove to members of the state constitutional convention that they are progressive enough not to require massive changes in county government and the county judiciary.

The fact is that county government progressiveness is indefensible because it is non-existent. An equitable pay plan for employees is a rudiment of any going business or governmental unit.

Yet, Randall County doesn't have one. Modern personnel administration has passed the county by while commissioners whittled and raised their own salaries to exorbitant levels.

It will be difficult to convince the people of the state that county government is not outmoded as a way of doing the public's business unless county government can make the changes required to meet the needs and demands of the times.

And, unless the public has that conviction, county government will be changed by legislation — if not through a new Texas Constitution, then through other means later.

Amarillo College is now offering senior citizens of Amarillo their college classes free on an audit basis.

Professor Writes Articles For Year Book

A West Texas State University government professor has written five articles dealing with the Middle East for Collier's 1974 Year Book, an annual supplement to Collier's Encyclopedia.

Dr. Roy E. Thoman

Dr. Roy E. Thoman, associate professor of political science, contributed articles on Iraq, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen, reporting on major events in those countries during 1973.

The articles trace the governmental happenings and economic developments of each of the countries, all of which were in some way involved during 1973 with either another outbreak of conflict between the Israelis and Egyptians or with an oil export embargo for the United States.

More than 800,000 copies of the year book are produced annually and distributed throughout the world by the Macmillan Educational Corporation.

Thoman authored last year an article on the Middle East for a major international relations journal.

At the university, he teaches courses in international relations and the Middle East.

Paper Problem Ironed Out

A running battle to obtain paper for recording vital records in the county clerk's office came to an end Friday and when the smoke cleared everybody involved termed the battle only a "problem in communication."

Initial skirmishing began last fall when Xerox Corporation sold its interest in photo-stat equipment to an Oklahoma City firm, Itek.

Randall County commissioners had signed a year contract with Xerox to provide paper for County Clerk LeRoy Hutton's photo-stat machine for $47.25 per roll.

But, Itek representatives insisted the county should pay a higher price — up to nearly $70 per roll.

For months during the fall and winter, commissioners have met with Xerox officials to straighten out the problem — all to no avail.

Several times during the interim, Hutton ran out of photo-stat paper and had to borrow paper from the Potter County clerk.

Last Monday, a Xerox official told commissioners his hands were tied in the problem.

But, Friday, a representative of Itek, Jerry McLelland, appeared before commissioners and told them the problem was solved, a new bill will be submitted and 16 rolls of paper at the Xerox rate are on their way to Hutton.

Shooting Trial Begins Monday

Trial for Philip Max Clark of Amarillo, charged with assault with intent to murder with malice, is set to begin in 181st District Court in Canyon Monday morning.

Jury selection will begin at 9 a.m. for Clark, charged with the September shooting of David Hugo Loewenstern, also of Amarillo.

Roy Norton, whose trial consumed several days two weeks ago here, was found guilty of assault with intent to murder without malice and given a three year probation sentence in connection with the same incident.

Clark testified at the Norton trial and admitted shooting Loewenstern after the youth charged into the living room of his apartment and shouted "You're a dead sonofabitch."

Clark is charged with entering Loewenstern's apartment and shooting him with a shotgun.

Clark testified that he and Norton entered Loewenstern's apartment to seek money for some drugs they allege the youth had stolen from Clark earlier that month at gunpoint.

Underground And Underworld
Under Canyon Readers' Pillows

By ANN MELIN

The devil and the Mafia, more than anything else, have kept the reading public of Canyon awake nights for the past two years.

According to city librarian Mary Huntington, William Blatty's "The Exorcist" and Mario Puzo's "The Godfather" have been the most constantly checked out of the library for the past two years.

The popularity of the Mafia epic is currently waning, she says. But with the debut of the film adaptation of "The Exorcist" and the accompanying publicity on its chilling impact on American audiences, a waiting list for the book in the Canyon library is almost as long as the waiting lines in front of theatres where the flick is showing.

"The Exorcist," which deals with the demonic possession of a young girl, "upsets Canyon readers more than it scares them," Mrs. Huntington says.

"The fact that a child is being provoked to do horrible things because she is possessed by the devil seems to bother readers deeply," she says.

Another book dealing with the supernatural, Tom Tryon's "The Other," has also been very popular with Canyon readers, she says.

Preoccupation with the occult novels has also led readers to delve into tomes on witchcraft, sorcery and other topics dealing with matters beyond the realm of the everyday.

The library has acquired all the works of Carlos Castaneda, the proselytizer for Mexican mysticism based on the peyote drug experience. Although Castaneda has acquired a wide following throughout the United States, he's yet to entrance local readers, Mrs. Huntington says.

Canyon readers' penchant for otherworldly literature is counterpointed nicely by their seeming enthusiasm for practical, do-it-yourself type books, according to Mrs. Huntington.

Of these, she says, do-it-yourself psychiatry books tend to go over big. The best-selling "I'm OK — You're OK," a book by Dr. Thomas A. Harris carrying the imposing subtitle, "A practical guide to transactional analysis," is all the rage locally, the librarian says.

Another popular book in this genre is W. Hugh Misseldine's "Your Inner Child of the Past," which attempts to link faults, phobias and manias of adulthood to early upbringing and childhood traumas.

Asked why the public seems to be so concerned with psychiatric panaceas, Mrs. Huntington,

Robert A. Ingram, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Joe Ingram of 4202 Gary Lane in Amarillo, suffered injuries to his legs and was taken to Nebbett Hospital here and then to High Plains

Shelton said a car driven by Dale Berry, 18, of route 2, was northbound on 8th Street as it passed the football field just north of the junior high.

Shelton said he was told a school bus, southbound, had just passed Berry's vehicle when the Ingram youth ran from behind the bus and collided with the back end of the Berry car.

proffered that perhaps it's because "people have problems that bother them, problems they don't want to discuss with others."

"And who can afford a psychiatrist these days?" she laughed.

Among the most popular do-it-yourself books are those dealing with quilting and patchwork, which are currently in vogue.

People aren't reading too much about politics, she says. Nor are they reading history, except that which comes by way of the historical novels, which are perennial favorites among local readers.

In the historical novel category, Mrs. Huntington says readers seem most fascinated with the period of English history falling between William the Conqueror and Elizabeth I.

Television and movie adaptations of books inevitably stimulate interest in reading the written version of the story, she says.

Television, long castigated for its tendency to lure people away from the printed word, seems to have the reverse effect on Canyon readers, according to Mrs. Huntington.

The recent TV premiere of the film, "Hawaii" resulted in a scurry to the library to check out the James Michener classic.

The BBC series, "The Six Wives of Henry VIII," seemed to have stimulated interest in the Tudor monarch and his various spouses. Mrs. Huntington said several residents came to the library looking for books dealing with the reign of Prince Hal.

The librarian says she re-ordered the works of F. Scott Fitzgerald after a number of phone calls requesting books by the 1920's novelist, whose works are currently enjoying a film-and-TV revival.

The gothic romance seems to have away over readers (predominantly women) of all age groups, from subteen to over-60.

The elderly go in for gothic romances, she says, but not those they describe as "too modern."

The librarian says she likes to find out what her clientele likes to read so she can aid them in the selection of books. The operation of a small town library is a lot like a country store, she says. It can offer personalized service.

"If I have a science fiction buff recommend a book to me, I try to remember the title so I can suggest the book to others who like to read in that particular vein," she says.

Some of Mrs. Huntington's readers leave the choice of books they read completely up to her.

"If I pick a book out for them once and they like it, they sometimes ask me to pick out books again and again."

Mrs. Huntington says she tries to read the books she feels will be most popular with readers. She also relies on book reviews in library journals.

And sometimes the librarian has had times when she has to recommend that a reader NOT read a book.

"I remember one little old lady that used to come in here who'd read just about everything in the library except the newly-received books. She took a book out of the new section, brought it back, threw it on the counter and declared that 'words like that shouldn't be put in print.'"

"I thought to myself, 'my gosh, what did I let her get a hold of?' It was an innocent work that contained the word 'damn.' She picked it off a shelf that held far racier works like 'Portnoy's Complaint' and others."

Later, Mrs. Huntington said the same eightyish reader attempted to check out another book, this one far steamier than the first.

"I racked my brain thinking of a way to tell her the book wasn't for her. Finally, I just told her it was 'just too modern.' She looked at me seriously and asked, 'is it really too modern?' I said it was. That seemed to convince her not to check it out."

WTSU Tenure To Be Eyed In Mon. Meet
Faculty members at West Texas State University will have a chance to express their views on a draft tenure policy for university implementation during a general faculty meeting at 3 p.m. Monday.

No action is expected from the Monday meeting on tenure procedures. A recently appointed tenure committee is expected to examine the policy again following Monday's session and then submit the proposal to University President Lloyd J. Watkins. The recommendations are eventually to be sent the full faculty for vote.

The draft version of the tenure policy states that the probation period for granting of tenure will be four years for those with the rank of professor or associate professor and six years for those with the rank of assistant professor.

The proposal also covers the due process which must be granted faculty members who are dismissed.

The survey would be conducted on a scientific basis through 150 personal interviews with local residents, excluding students at WTSU who live on campus.

Semmelbeck said the interviews would be with persons who are representative of all Canyon shoppers.

"We're not here to tell you how to run your businesses," Semmelbeck said. "You know your financial position, your personal problems. Our business is to give you some relevant information. We can't make you do anything. We just want to give you the information."

Semmelbeck said a university class in marketing research will conduct the interviews.

Some of the questions which might be asked in the survey include how often residents purchase various items such as groceries, insurance, clothing, where residents shop and why, and how much was spent.

Semmelbeck said the results of the interviews will be tabulated by computer and total statistics will be developed to show merchants how much money is available in Canyon for shoppers and how much is being spent for goods and services in city retail shops.

Children told merchants the information gleaned from the survey will be confidential and will be revealed to various merchants in private sessions.

A survey was taken on residents' attitudes about Canyon merchants several years ago by Chamber Manager Roland Black. That survey, which was sent in the mail to 500 residents, received just under 200 responses.

The survey indicated that while a majority of the respondents favor Canyon as a place to live, a slim majority believe the city is a desirable place to shop. Sixty-five of those answering the questionnaire said Canyon had good retail shops while 48 termed the shops only fair.

A special committee of the chamber will eye the feasibility of conducting the WTSU survey and methods of financing the survey.

an organization formed to aid Boys Ranch.

Pond's concern has spread to other areas, also, as he has become involved in the Texas Panhandle Community Action Program, a project for needy families and underprivileged children. Pond is chairman of the program.

During the past summer, Pond was instrumental in forming a citizens committee to study the solutions to Buffalo Lake. Working with other citizens, Pond formulated a program to rejuvenate the lake.

Many organizations are indebted to Pond for service. He is commander of the Canyon American Legion Post, a member of the Masonic Lodge, a director of Girlstown, a director of the local Chamber of Commerce, a director of Big Brothers of Canyon, a director of the Opportunity Plan, Inc., a member of the Randall County Historical Survey Committee, the Lions Club. He is a member of the advisory board for vocational education for the Canyon School District and is on a committee for the Office of Early Childhood Development.

During the chamber banquet, Raillard handed over the gavel of his office to John Childs, newly-elected chamber president for 1974.

Outgoing directors for the chamber were recognized, including Cary Magness, Kenneth Thompson, Dr. Charles Smallwood and David West.

New directors were honored, including George Stevens, Richard Tung, Weldon Trice and Mrs. Lois Rice.

Plan Game Night

The Canyon Band Parents have scheduled a game night for Sunday at the old Umbarger Gym.

The event will begin at eight p.m. with a two dollar admission charge for each person.

Prizes, free popcorn, and musical entertainment will highlight the activities, with a bake sale and refreshments to bring in money for the organization.

WTSU Professors

Studying Vitamin E

Two West Texas State University professors have started a two-month investigation into the effect of vitamin E on the bloodstream.

A. J. Luquette and "Sturdi" Wannamaker hope to discover what effect the vitamin might have on fat-bearing bodies in the bloodstream. Recent evidence has suggested vitamin E might help blood cells circulate oxygen more efficiently to various organs and at the same time slow down the build-ups of cholesterol that lead to arterial complications.

Sixty-five WTSU male students are cooperating in the experiment. Each man will be tested three times weekly over the next eight weeks. The men will be monitored by a tiny transmitter connected to heart probes during exercise periods.

Half of the group is being given regular doses of vitamin E. The other men are being given sugar tablets.

At the end of the test period, professors Luquette and Wannamaker will compare the two groups in an effort to determine the effect the vitamin has had.

vehicle.

The plane came to rest facing north after plowing through a chain link fence and breaking a stout tree trunk.

The front portion of the plane was demolished, the front windshield was broken out and the wings were heavily damaged.

The plane did not burn.

Another witness to the crash said the plane flipped several times after hitting the power line.

An employee of Dobbs Corp. in Canyon told The News Randolph was coming to the city to work on a lathe recently purchased by the company.

He said Dobbs employees were waiting for Randolph to "buzz" the corporation's building and were then to go to the Canyon airport to pick him up by car.

Several suitcases were found in the plane.

The plane crash location is only about ¼ of a mile east of the now-open Canyon Airport.

delightful eccentric whose conversation abounds in wacky non sequiturs, the Countess Aurelia, the Madwoman of Chailiot, precisely fits that qualification.

After reading the play, I recalled those classic lines by Olivia deHavilland in "The Snake Pit."

When an insane asylum nurse-turned-patient bewilderedly asks where things are going to end, Miss deHavilland tells her "it will end when there are more sick ones than well ones — then the sick ones will lock up all the well ones."

After watching the Madwoman of Chailiot in operation, one wonders if it might not be a better world, after all, if the crazies of the earth were given the nod to straighten out the mess that the supposedly sane have wrought upon society.

Casting for "Madwoman" is due to be completed early this week, Moore says. Production dates are Feb. 20-23 in the Branding Iron Theatre.

"The Co-Respondents," a dramatic and musically inclined trio from Olympia, Wash., will present three performances on the West Texas State University campus Monday and Tuesday.

Monday's performances begin in the West Texas Branding Iron Theatre for students in English, 9 a.m.; history and sociology, 10 a.m.; and speech 11 a.m.

The second production, "Fun and Games," is scheduled for the WT Activities Center Ballroom at 7 p.m., Jan. 28. The program includes topics on women and marriage and the admission price is 75 cents.

The concluding performance will be in the Branding Iron Theatre at 9:30 a.m., Jan. 29. Admission price is 50 cents and WT students will be admitted free. The presentation, "Enter-Lauding," focuses on women and equality.

Sponsored by the Associated Women Students, Patricia Larson, Denise Livingston and Sandra Nisbet work hard to express ideas about the women's movement. The trio try to leave their audiences emotionally strengthened and intellectually stimulated.

The Co-Respondents have combined experience in the performing arts and social consciousness to express their feelings that "the women's view, our view, is the human truly realistic and civilized one."

abate? No one knows."

While Watkins admitted he doesn't have the answers to all those questions, he said he believes he has some answers.

"First of all, we are convinced that we must increasingly reach out to serve the Golden Spread region," he said. "We must do what we can to demonstrate our relevance to an increasingly wide area."

He noted that the university has begun this approach, sending 37 courses to be offered in various communities.

"Second, we are enlarging our concept of the college group," he said. "We know now that sayings such as 'you can't teach an old dog new tricks' are false. We know that senior citizens can and do profit from university studies."

Like wise, he said, married women who failed to complete their educations and men and women who are not happy in their current jobs could benefit from more higher education.

"There may be fewer young people coming up in the school system, but the demands of those

He said the aerial photographs might become sophisticated enough to allow NASA map readers to predict insect infestations or spread of disease over a wide area.

The large acreage in the northwest part of the county is being used as a ground proof area where officials may make on-the-spot confirmation of the data received through the photographs.

Brazzil said the photographing venture is a training period for the map readers who hope to be able to relate what they see in the photographs to what is actually on the ground.

Helicopters will be used to help the officials cover the croplands in the area.

Brazzil said the program could prove very helpful in predicting world food supplies.

Panhandle Subject of New Book

By ANN MELIN
A West Texas State University history professor has been credited with writing the first, single comprehensive history of the Texas Panhandle spanning the region's development from prehistoric times to the beginning of the 20th Century.

Dr. Frederick W. Rathjen, associate professor of history at WTSU since 1956, is the author of "The Texas Panhandle Frontier," a study which examines the frontier experience of the Texas Panhandle in depth, relating its regional development to the larger picture of state and national history.

The work has been published by the University of Texas Press and is now available in local bookstores.

In his book, Dr. Rathjen synthesizes widely scattered primary and secondary materials gathered in over a decade's research on the subject.

Rathjen's approach to history, he says, is from the regional viewpoint, an approach he learned to appreciate while studying under eminent Texas historian H. Bailey Carroll and Western historian Walter Prescott Webb.

The Webb-Carroll thesis that "the local, the regional, contain the universal," is carried on in the work of the historians' former student. According to Dr. Rathjen, the regional approach provides a "very manageable" geographic unit with which to work — "a unit large enough to be significant yet small enough to examine in great detail."

The study opens with an examination of the Panhandle's physiographical conditions. Successive chapters explore the lifestyles of the region's original inhabitants, including the prehistoric Indian cultures and the history and culture of the historic Indians and their first contacts with Europeans.

According to Dr. Rathjen, a study of Indian cultures is vital to any history of the region since the red man forms "an important link between the land itself and the people of European origin who later settled it."

"And the way the Indian lived upon the land often tells us a lot about the land itself," he adds. "If the Anglo-American wasn't so contemptuous of the American Indian, he could have learned quite a bit about how to survive in a given environment."

"Not that the Indian should be idolized as one who knew all and who achieved perfection... but perhaps because he couldn't do anything else, the Indian managed to adapt pretty well to his environment. On the other hand, the European settler expected the environment to change to suit his own ways — and the upshot of this attitude, one might say, is the current energy crisis," Rathjen explained.

One of the interpretive viewpoints of Rathjen that is carried out in his work is the idea that the Texas Panhandle's history is very old in terms of its first contacts with European civilization.

The Panhandle was first visited by the Spaniards in 1541 — 66 years before the founding of Jamestown, 79 years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, Dr. Rathjen points out.

"People tend to think of the Panhandle as a very young region. Actually, some of the most exciting things that happened here occurred before 1876," Rathjen says.

For about three centuries, he says, the Texas Panhandle was part of the Spanish frontier. Aside from their contribution of colorful place names like "Amarillo," "Palo Duro" and "Tulia," the Spaniards' influence on the subsequent development of the region was negligible, Rathjen says.

In the early 19th Century, a series of "surprisingly orderly occurrences happened which would turn the Panhandle away from the Spanish Southwest and toward Anglo-America and Texas," Rathjen says.

In 1821, the Mexican Revolution drove Spain from the area and the first Anglo-Americans began to enter the region, he says.

The arrival of hide hunters in 1873, the consequent slaughtering of the buffalo herds of the region and the pacification of the Indians of the area gradually made of the region a void awaiting settlement, Rathjen says.

The concluding phase of frontier evolution, Rathjen says, involved the migration of a "small but surprisingly cosmopolitan population into the region from almost all surrounding areas."

At first the settlers engaged mainly in ranching, later diversifying into stock farming and agriculture, he says.

Although his book has no definite terminal date, Rathjen points that by about 1900, "the frontier phase of the Panhandle's development had pretty well passed."

"Although remnants of the frontier civilization would linger on after 1900, there began at about that time the start of a rapid phasing out of the frontier and the phasing in of the kind of regional development that is still going on today," Rathjen says.

In his book, Rathjen rejects the position that the capitulation of the Indians was caused primarily by the destruction of the buffalo. He argues that while the disappearance of the herds might have been one factor in running the Indians out of the Panhandle, it was not the decisive one.

"It took an overwhelming military defeat of the Indians by the United States Army to ultimately make the red man evacuate this region," Rathjen says.

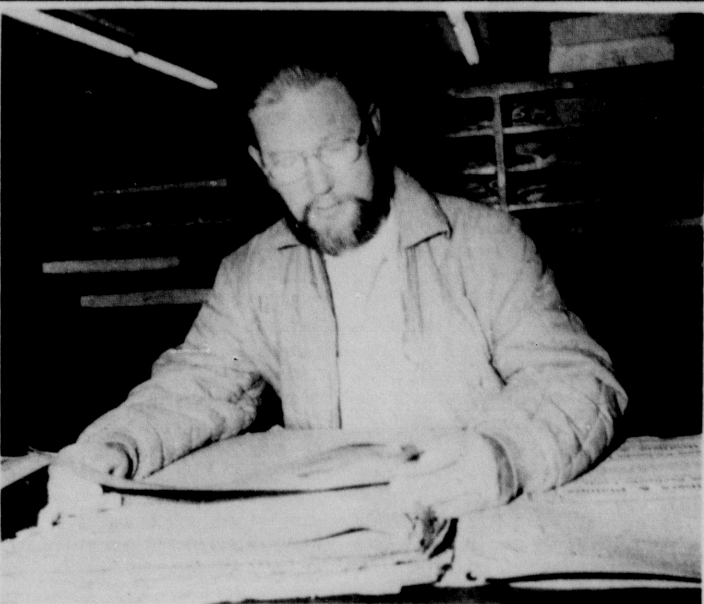

"The Federal government carried out the function of opening the region for development by ridding the area of the Indian before the area was actually settled. Thus, the Panhandle didn't suffer Indian raids such as those experienced in other parts of the state," Rathjen says.

Rathjen says his interest in the Texas Panhandle frontier arises from his long personal association with the area.

Material for his book includes a wealth of primary and secondary sources, including manuscripts and interviews in archival collections, primarily those in the Panhandle-Plains Museum and the University of Texas collections.

Rathjen also utilizes a vast number of government documents, published works, including personal memoirs and published collections of documents; and numerous journal articles and secondary works relating to the history of the region.

Rathjen holds bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Texas.

Sissy Farenthold To Speak On Bill Of Rights At WTSU

The spring 1974 Special Programs series at West Texas State University holds something in store for almost anyone, whether they be crusaders for women's rights, lovers of classical music or connoisseurs of Spanish dance.

The series begins February 6, when Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, one of the nation's most prominent women politicians, speaks on the topic "The Bill of Rights: 1789 and 1974."

Since 1968, which marks the beginning of her four-year stint in the Texas Legislature, Mrs. Farenthold has compiled an impressive list of credits.

In 1972, she was a contender in the Texas gubernatorial primary, and that same year ran a strong second for the Democratic vice presidential nomination. Since then, she has been named Women's National Political Caucus president, and in the words of the Chicago Tribune, "Not just the eyes of Texas are upon her now, but those of the whole nation."

Mrs. Farenthold will appear at 8 p.m. in the Activities Center on the Canyon campus.

On March 12, at 8 p.m. in the Activities Center, chamber music will be the offering when the Fine Arts Quartet performs.

The Fine Arts Quartet is celebrating its twenty-eighth year as one of America's foremost string quartets. The internationally acclaimed ensemble have appeared for eight consecutive years on the American Broadcasting Company network. They have been regular guests on the Today Show and have performed on the Bell Telephone Hour and NBC Recital Hall.

Famed Spanish dancer Jose Greco will be featured in the final offering of the series with a lecture-demonstration-recital April 18 at 8 p.m. in the Canyon High School Auditorium.

During his performance Greco explores with his audience the character and history of the Spanish people. He then demonstrates with Nana Lorca, his accomplished partner, the various techniques and characteristics of dances originating from various locales.

Greco's maestro at the piano completes the scope of the performance.

Tickets for each of the special programs may be obtained at the Activities Center Office on the WTSU campus. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for non-WTSU students. WT students are admitted free.

Knit Fabrics To Be Talked During Class

The Randall County Home Demonstration Council will sponsor a series of classes on how to sew with knit fabrics beginning Feb. 8 in Canyon.

The courses will be from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. each Friday through April 5 and demonstrations will include fabric care and discussions of knit fabrics, adjusting patterns for fit and alterations.

The instructor, provided by Amarillo Stretch & Sew Fabric Center, will illustrate making such garments as T-shirts, mens and ladies sweaters, ladies suit jacket, slacks and shorts, skirts, shells and bathing suits.

Special attention will be given zippers, button holes, welt pockets, tab fronts, collars, machine button holes and varied neck versions.

Fee for the classes is $15 and enrollment in the course will be limited. Child care will be available at the First United Methodist Church mothers-day-out program with regular fees to be charged.

Persons interested in the courses should call Mrs. Kenneth Wilson at 655-2446.

Deadline Nears For Ordering Windbreak Trees

Deadline for ordering trees to be used as windbreaks on area farms is Friday, according to Don Dolle of the Soil Conservation Service.

Dolle said order blanks for the windbreak trees are available from the SCS office in Canyon or by calling 655-4411.

A pamphlet on "How to Plant Windbreak Tree Seedlings," is also available at the local SCS office.

Dolle said the trees should be planted in the spring, between February and April. Local townspeople may also order the trees and receive the pamphlet.

Do Land Use Bills Spell End Of Private Property Rights?

The Right of Private Property, guaranteed to the people under provisions of the Fifth Amendment, and respected as fundamental to individual freedom since 15 December, 1791, is being overturned by political madmen in Washington.

Establishment of a federal "land czar" is a reality under Senate Bill 268, passed 64-21 June, 1973, entitled, "Land Use Policy and Planning Assistance Act."

Fifteen-thousand words in the bill spell the end of traditional concepts of private ownership of land as conceived and understood under the American system of constitutional government.

A similar bill, H.R. 10294, identified as "The Udall Bill," is before the House of Representatives for passage.

The States are falling into line with the federal land use control plan by appointing their own land use commissions, which would carry out the dictates of the federal government.

Senator Paul Fannin of Arizona says that the land use policy "would do great violence to our traditional American rights," and warns that through the bill property owners can be reduced to landless serfs beholden to the Lord of the manor in Washington.

It is clear that appeals to Congress to correct illegal transfer of property rights to the federal government is futile.

To learn how tyranny can be challenged by conscientious citizens at the local level of government, write for a free copy of, "THE NEW FEDERALISM AND LAND CONTROL," Committee to Restore the Constitution, Inc., 990 Savings Building, Fort Collins, Colorado 80521.

Nursing Director Prefers Teaching

"There comes a time to set priorities, and make decisions," said the newly appointed head of the Department of Nursing at West Texas State University, of her move from the government employment ranks to the academic setting.

Dr. Hazel Aslakson is the former Nurse Consultant Chief of the Project Grants Section of the Division of Nursing for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

She came here last week to begin a new job as head of the WTSU Nursing Department.

"I wanted to get back to the academic setting and work with students again," said Dr. Aslakson.

A native of North Carolina, Dr. Aslakson has spent most of her career in the East, Germany, and Japan.

New to Texas and the Panhandle, the new director has spent her first week at WTSU in orientation to acquaint herself with the program structure and with faculty members.

She will use this week for touring the clinical facilities used by the nursing students.

As a government employee, Dr. Aslakson "worked with faculty, educators, and served as an advisor."

"It was a whole different ballgame. I was never down on the student teacher level," said Dr. Aslakson, stressing her preference for the job as an educator.

She has held teaching positions at Georgetown University Hospital and Capital City School of Nursing, Washington, D.C., and St. Elizabeth's Hospital School of Nursing in Dayton, Ohio.

She also served in the Army Nurse Corps from 1942-1946 at the Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco and Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

As the wife of an Air Force officer stationed overseas and abroad, Dr. Aslakson was Deputy Director of Nursing for the American Red Cross in Tokyo, Japan, and an instructor of nursing for the Red Cross in Weisbaden, Germany.

As the new director of the WTSU nursing program, Dr. Aslakson will supervise the training of 439 students.

"For the rest of this semester, I will not be teaching. Most of my duties will be coordinating curriculum and administrative work, but I will be teaching courses in the future," said Dr. Aslakson.

Having no definite plans for changes yet, Dr. Aslakson says the WTSU nursing program is a very good one, and has the advantage of an "integrated curriculum."

She said she finds the clinical facilities in the area which provide practical training for the students to be "plentiful and excellent."

Dr. Aslakson said she never cared to be "anything else except a nurse."

She was influenced in her decision to become a nurse by several relatives who were doctors and nurses.

Though the new director has never lived in Texas, she has a son, Lieutenant Thomas Aslakson, who is stationed at Wells Air Force Base.

"I have never lived in the wide open spaces before, but I love it," said Dr. Aslakson after her first full week in the Panhandle.

News Brief

Mr. and Mrs. Ric Wester were recent visitors in the homes of their parents, Mrs. Winnie Wester and Mr. and Mrs. Bill West, all of Canyon. While they were here, they were notified that Terry Wester was on the Dean's Honor Roll at East Texas State University, with a grade point average of 3.69. Terry is majoring in Art and Ric is taking printing and photography in East Texas University at Commerce, Tex.

As a government employee, Dr. Aslakson "worked with faculty, educators, and served as an advisor."

Open House Held To Celebrate 97th Birthday Of Mrs. T.T. Fain

An open house and party held Jan. 20th honored Mrs. T.T. Fain on her 97th birthday.

The celebration was held at the home of Mrs. Fain's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Oldham of Canyon.

Assisting with the reception were another daughter and two sons: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pendergast of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Fain of Canyon, and Mr. and Mrs. Watters Fain, also of Canyon. Also in the house party was Mrs. Oldham's daughter, Mrs. Tom Somerville, and Mrs.

Ole Carlson, a granddaughter of Mrs. Fain.

Mrs. Fain has made her home in Canyon with her daughter since 1941.

The day long celebration in honor of Mrs. Fain, who is now confined to her bed, drew about 85 friends and relatives.

Mrs. Fain, the former Lillian Amelia Winney, was born in 1877, in Hill County, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Winney.

The family moved to Collingsworth County in 1892 from Lampasas County, where Mr. Winney became a farmer.

The family settled north of Salt Fork, the site now of the Lute Community.

Then 15 years old, the young girl considered the trip an adventure.

Mr. Winney traded for a claim and built several rooms onto their house that included a dug-out area in a hillside so there would be plenty of space for the seven boys and girls.

Lillian Winney attended the Indian Creek school about a mile and a half from her home.

She got her teachers certificate and taught a year at Dozier before returning to teach at Indian Creek.

In 1902, on New Year's Day, she was married to T.T. Fain. For a number of years they lived on his ranch in the Needwood Community. When their children reached school age, they moved into Wellington.

Mr. Fain died in 1939, and Mrs. Fain moved to Canyon two years later.

Women's Club Hears Financial Director

Members of the Heritage Woman's Club met recently to hear advice from guest speaker, Glenn Parkey, District Director of Financial Service Cooperation in Amarillo.

Parkey spoke to the group about "What Every Wife Should Know About Becoming a Widow, But Was Afraid To Ask."

He presented information on how a wife can prepare herself in the event that she must suddenly take over family affairs.

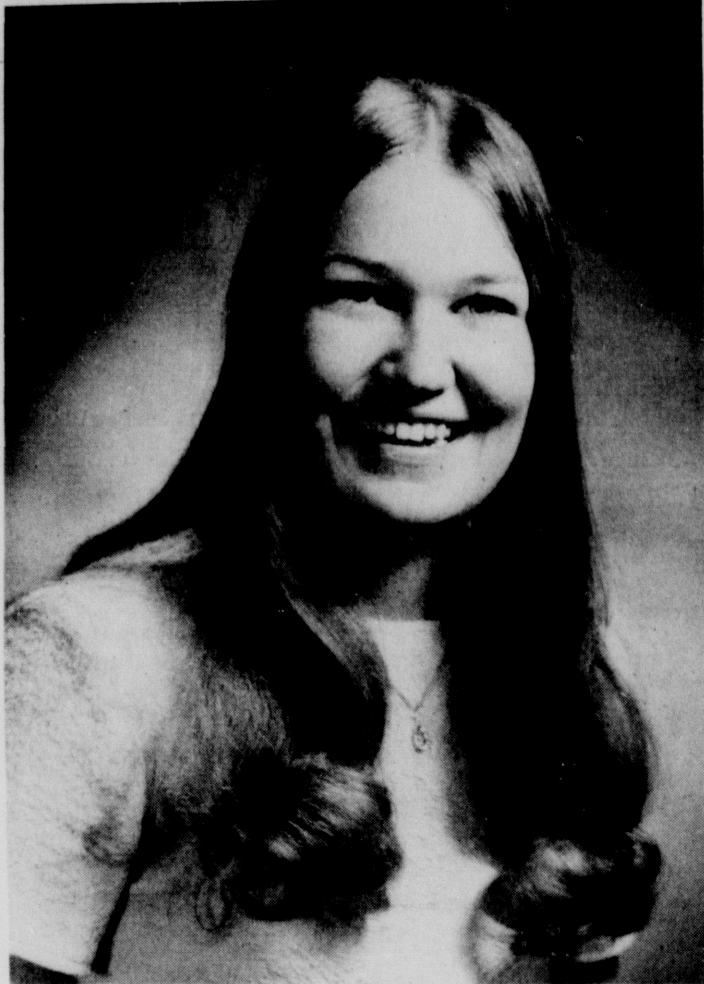

The financial director suggested that every wife assume household financial responsibility by having an investment account, and helping with income tax returns. He emphasized that every wife should acquaint herself with the insurance status of the family, and know about the location of a will, if one is made for her husband.

Parkey said that every wife should centralize important papers, and go with her husband when he sees bankers and lawyers.

He also suggested that she ask her husband to prepare a letter of instructions.

Following the discussion of problems facing a widow, the club elected new officers for the coming year.

They are Marion Marrs, president; Adrienne Pennington, vice-president; Linda Looney, secretary; Claudine Leman, treasurer; Janette Perry, parliamentarian; Tricia Sims, reporter-historian; Linda Ray, ways and means; Darlene Plank, program chairman; and Janie Louder, yearbook chairman.

Sale Of Handcrafted Articles Slows After Christmas Rush

By SANDY GREINER

Business is slow right now at the two stores flanking the old Canyon movie theater.

The two unusual stores obscurely located next to the old theatre are the Blue Daisy and the Lemon Drop.

Though the names don't reveal it, the stores both sell handmade items, with the Blue Daisy also handling imported items, while the Lemon Drop specializes only in handmade items from area consignees.

Both store managers describe business as slow since the Christmas rush ended. It would seem that not many customers indulge themselves with handmade specialties, and reserve the opportunity to buy such items only as gifts.

But, both stores have been in operation for over a year.

Under the ownership of Mrs. Floyd Kiser, the Blue Daisy handles a wide variety of merchandise.

The most popular item is probably the Indian jewelry. The turquoise stone set in silver is a sought after piece of jewelry. Necklaces, bracelets, and rings are brought into the Blue Daisy by Mrs. Kiser's son-in-law, Frank Walker, Jr., of Wheeler.

Walker contracts the jewelry from four silversmiths in the Gallup and Albuquerque, N.M. area. The jewelry comes from the Zuni and Navajo tribes.

Mrs. Kiser said the price of the jewelry is kept close to that of the jewelry sold on the Indian property.

Also brought in with the Indian jewelry is an assortment of African trade beads.

A rumor of a scarcity of the silver and turquoise stone used in the Indian jewelry has increased the demand for the work. Mrs. Kiser said she does not know how much longer the store will be able to get all the Indian jewelry ordered.

Some of the imported items sold in the Blue Daisy include hand painted Korean dolls with real hair, handcrafted jewelry boxes from Poland, and crushed turquoise on brass work from India.

Local residents provide some of the work displayed in the store.

Sunbonnets depicting the pioneer days of the Panhandle area are provided for the shop by Mrs. Kiser's mother, Mrs. E. P. Harding.

Daisy Neal of Canyon makes the easily recognized character of Raggedy Ann dolls.

Only handmade articles are shown at the Lemon Drop which is owned by Myrna Knerim and Charlotte McClure.

City Physician Named WT Foundation Member

Dr. Charles R. Nester, Canyon surgeon, has been named to the Board of Trustees of the West Texas State University Foundation.

Nester was one of 13 men named to the board on the "basis of their leadership in the community in which they live, and their personal civic and professional contributions to the Golden Spread area," according to Dr. Jack Walker, head of the WTSU Speech Department and chairman of the board.

The WTSU Foundation is under the jurisdiction of the Board of Regents, and is "charged with the duty of creating and developing a program for promoting the general welfare of the university through gifts and endowments," says Walker.

The organization was chartered in 1946 by the State of Texas.

In a December 1973 meeting, the Board of Trustees "voted to increase the number of trustees from 12 to 25 as provided for in the Bylaws," explained Walker.

The newly appointed members will serve four year terms, with the first meeting of the enlarged board taking place in late February at the Canyon campus.

Others named to the Foundation board are Leonard Gunderson, representative for Southwestern Life Insurance, Amarillo; Dick Harris, president American National Bank, Amarillo; Earl Herring, Herring Furniture Company, Amarillo; Kenneth Irwin, executive vice president Gruver State Bank; Bob McLean, president Farmer's State Bank, Dimmitt.

R. E. Koehler, president of the Citizens National Bank, Dalhart; Robert King, president Tascosa National Bank, Amarillo; Max Sherman, State Senator and attorney, Amarillo; J. R. Taylor, owner-manager Amarillo Livestock Auction; Richard Ware, vice president Amarillo National Bank; and James L. Whyte, vice president of the Southwestern Newspaper Corporation and general manager of the Amarillo Globe-News.

Applications For Tax Break Now Taken

Applications from Randall County residents over the age of 65 are now being taken in the tax office for exemptions of $3000 for homesteads.

Mrs. Audrey Bruse, county tax assessor-collector, said the exemptions, if applied for, will apply to the county ad valorem tax, and the taxes charged by the South Randall County Hospital District, the Bushland School District and the High Plains Water District.

The City of Canyon has also passed the $3000 exemption for senior citizens. Application for exemption from the city tax may be made in the school-city tax office in the Canyon courthouse.

Mrs. Bruse said applicants for the exemption from the county, hospital and water district taxes should bring proof of age and proof of ownership to property.

The exemption is not automatic. Deadline for filing applications is April 30.

Safety poem winners Dal Foster and Janice Williams.

Two CJHS Students Win State Recognition

Two Canyon Junior High School students have won statewide recognition for their ability to depict the dangers of highway-railroad grade crossings in poetry.

The Railroad-Highway Grade Crossing Contest was sponsored by the Texas Safety Association and the Texas Classroom Teachers Association.

Dal Foster, ninth grade student at CJHS, won the top prize of $250 in the poetry division of the competition.

Janice Williams, also a ninth grader at CJHS, was among the six Texas students who received honorable mention for their poetic efforts.

The winning works were selected from among the thousands of entries from eighth, ninth and tenth graders across the state.

Entries in essay, poetry and poster categories were judged in preliminaries by the local Texas Classroom Association. Works selected locally were then sent to Austin for the final competition.

The contest is designed to promote individual awareness of the need to improve highway-railroad grade crossing safety, explained Tom Norvell, TSA Railroad Transportation Section vice president.

Foster's prize-winning poem describes in verse the fate of a hapless motorist who neglects to observe the proper precautions in crossing the tracks.

Miss Williams' poem embodies a similar idea, she says. It tells of the comeuppance of a joyrider who scoffs at the edicts of safety experts and gets his "kicks" from narrow escapes, she says.

The difference between the two students handling of the grade crossing theme lies in the fate they deal out to the motorists in their poems.

"I let mine get killed," says Foster.

According to Miss Williams, she started to follow the advice of a sister and dish out a similar ending for her driver. She decided instead on a hairbreadth escape because it left her motorist "alive and able to realize the errors of his ways."

"I figured that was the best way to end a poem like this," she said.

8th, 9th Grades Split Outings

The Canyon Junior High 7th and 8th grade white girls teams split decisions with the Phillips junior high schoolers Monday night.

The 7th grade lost 16-44 while the 8th grade triumphed with a 41-9 score.

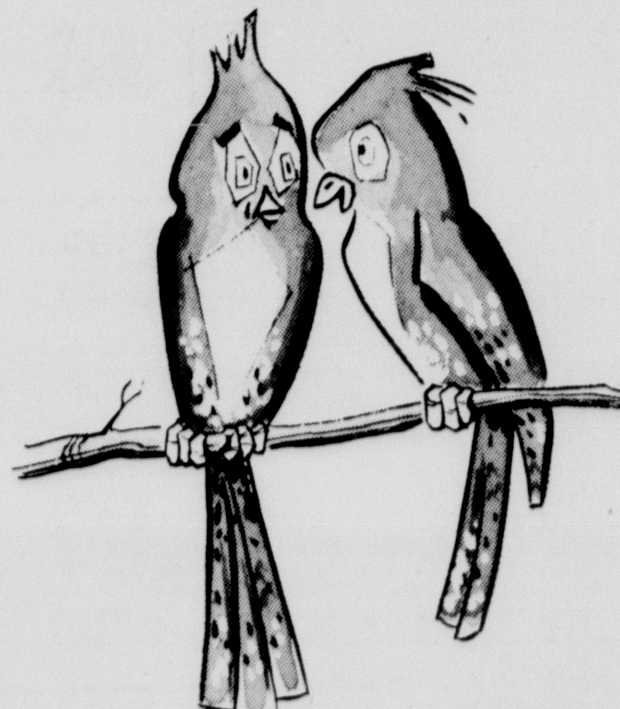

Cindy Craig scored 8 points for the 7th graders followed by Petra Carroll with 4, Linda Plain with 2 and Nancy Walling with 2.

For the 9th graders, Glenda Williams hit 17 points, followed by Linda Warren with 12, Merry Joy Johnson with 11 and Susan Wilbur with 1.
